State Society Asks For Baugh Reinstatement

CONTRACT PRACTICE WRESTLED WITH BY ALABAMA DOCTORS

MOBILE, Ala., April 30—The Alabama Medical Association today wrestled with list and contract practice, the case of Dr. W. P. Baugh, of Morgan County occupying the board the greater part of the day.

The Morgan County Medical Society was instructed to re-instate Dr. Baugh to membership within 60 days. Dr. Baugh operated a hospital at Albany and was expelled from the society for alleged contract or list practice but on appeal to the state association at Birmingham, expulsion was modified to provide for one year's suspension reinstatement to follow expiration of the period.

Last April Dr. Baugh applied for reinstatement. The society denied his application and from this action he appealed.

Dr. F. L. Chenault, president of the Morgan County Society, spoke in opposition to the board of censor report recommending reinstatement of Dr. Baugh. He charged that officials and representatives of the Morgan Society were denied a hearing while the matter was under consideration.

The special committee, to which was referred Morgan County correspondence, in its report said the letters and resolution of the society were intemperate and recommended that they be expunged from the record and the convention so ordered.

The convention approved the recommendation of censors that first aid committee be continued two years, during which it is to prepare a first aid code to be printed and used as a text book in the public schools of Alabama.

As legislative action is necessary to make this effective, it goes over for one year. If the legislature passes a law in conformity to this recommendation, doctors living in the vicinity of a public school would be expected to give instruction at least once a month in the schools.

Match Sets Fumes Ablaze; 2 Bodies Cremated

(Associated Press)

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 30—William D. Wills, 24, Dallas, Texas, and Bessie Coleman, said to be the only negro aviatrix in the world, were killed when the airplane in which they were making a practice flight, overturned at 2,000 feet over a field here today.

Wills' body was cremated after the plane fell to earth when a spectator struck a match near the wreck, igniting gasoline fumes. Wills was handling publicity for an exhibition the negro woman was to give here tomorrow.

Spectators said the plane took a nose dive at an altitude of about 3500 feet and overturned after it had dropped 1,500 feet. The negro woman fell out of the plane when it overturned and it dropped to earth with Wills.

As police prepared to remove the body from the wreckage, John T. Betsch, of the Jacksonville negro welfare league, who had accompanied them to the field, struck a match to light a cigarette, igniting the gasoline fumes. Police detained Betsch.

COMMERCE UNITS TO COME HERE IN JUNE TO GREET U. S. BODY

Bloodworth Talks Of Results At Mobile Convention

HOLT'S TALK IS MEETING FEATURE

Roads And Marketing Center Interest Of Junior Body

Units of the Alabama Junior Chamber of Commerce likely will send representatives to Albany-Decatur this June to act as a committee of welcome to the members of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce upon their arrival in Alabama. Word to this effect was brought here today by B. M. Bloodworth, who returned this morning from Mobile where he was a delegate from the Albany-Decatur Junior Chamber to the state conference.

The national Juniors will reach here on the morning of June 21 and will go by motor to Wilson Dam to inspect the government work there. They will return here and catch a south-bound train for Birmingham, where another stop-over will be made.

Details for the participation of other units in the reception here and in Florence were discussed informally at Mobile, but will be worked out later by state headquarters.

The Mobile conference closed last night, after a two-day session during which a great many questions were discussed by the Juniors, including good roads, farm co-operative marketing, use of Alabama farm products in Alabama industries, development of the port of Mobile and the possibility of affiliation with the national junior chamber.

The Alabama Juniors heard with much interest the outline of the plan for a survey of the Alabama highway system by Engineer Breed, who will be in this state within a few days to begin the work. While the delegates displayed marked enthusiasm for highways and for necessary bonds with which to build them, they delayed lending their approval to any particular plan of financing the construction of roads until after the report of the engineer is made on the results of his survey.

Farmers Are Aided
Not only was the interest of the Juniors in co-operative marketing marked but largely through the efforts of the Junior Chamber results already are being obtained on this plan.

At Thursday evening's banquet Leroy Holt, purchasing agent of the T. C. I., in Birmingham, told how his company is aiding Alabama manufacturers, farmers and other producers, by demanding that Alabama materials be used in the finished product the company purchases. It was with the result that there will be widespread use of Alabama products within Alabama.

Will Help Port
Not only did the Alabama Junior Chamber of Commerce go on record in favor of completion of the port of Mobile as rapidly as possible and release of the funds necessary for that achievement, but the state conference called upon each unit to conduct a survey of the industrial potentialities of its district, giving such information to the state docks commission, where it would be classified and tabulated and used in a campaign to divert as much shipping as possible to Alabama's seaport.

The Juniors also made the suggestion that if a feasible plan can be worked out by the agencies interested, that a trade emissary be sent to Latin-America with such classified information about Alabama industries. The belief was expressed such an emissary would help materially both the seaport and the up-state industries.

The Juniors directed state headquarters to make a survey of the industrial potentialities of its district, giving such information to the state docks commission, where it would be classified and tabulated and used in a campaign to divert as much shipping as possible to Alabama's seaport.

TENNESSEE VALLEY SCOUT COUNCIL TO BE ORGANIZED HERE

Drive For Necessary Budget May Open Next Week

WOULD INCLUDE THREE COUNTIES

Leaders Planning To Establish Camp This Summer

A Tennessee Valley Council of Boy Scouts of America will be formed with headquarters here.

Probably within the coming week a drive will be launched in four North Alabama cities, county seats of three counties, Hartsville, Cullman, Athens and Albany-Decatur for the raising of the Boy Scout budget for the coming year. The amount of the drive has not yet been definitely settled upon, not the quotas of the four cities established. It is believed however that at least $4,000 will have to be raised through popular subscription to carry on the work this year.

Headquarters troop of the Valley council will be established in these cities.

It is proposed that a camp site will be established within the section this summer which will vie with any other camp site in the South, lending business and professional men realizing the value of the Scout work, in the training of the youth and the preparation of a future generation of good citizenship.

Leading business men have been interested here for some weeks, planning for the opening of the campaign, it was stated today by Charles Rountree. The list of leaders in the campaign to establish Scout work in the three above mentioned counties include: Joseph A. Woods, John W. Wyker, Charles Rountree, I. V. Timberlake, Seneca Burr, S. E. Patterson, E. E. Graves, F. E. Hunt, H. H. Hunter, H. M. Priest and H. A. Wyatt.

Mr. Rountree said that official plans will be made during the first of the coming week.

PRISON REPORT IS RETURNED TO POOLE

Inspector Recommends Less Food Be Served To Prisoners

Sheriff C. E. Poole received a good report from the state prison department today, following the visit here several weeks ago by Miss Ann R. Davis, state prison inspector. The report tallied with all requisitions of the department with the exception that the county officials were recommended to serve the prisoners less food.

Deputy Sheriff B. C. Poole commented briefly upon the report today stating that the report from Miss Davis was satisfactory to the county authorities, who have tried to stay within the regulations as prescribed by the state.

The report covered a period of from May 1, 1924 to April 1, 1926. Auditing of the prison records showed that the reports handed in by the sheriff of this county tallied with the check-up of records here by Mr. Broom, state auditor.

CONVICT FACTIONS IN OUTBREAK OVER KNOX PROBE CASE

Quiet Prevails Today At Flat Top After Attack On Boss

INMATES ARE NOT IN ACCORD

Some Side With Prison Officials In Their Management

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 30—With the re-appearance of Roy Nolen, member of the state board of economy and control, before the Jefferson county grand jury, the inquiry into the case of James W. Knox, was believed to have broadened into a sweeping investigation of Alabama prison conditions in this county.

Attorney General Davis took personal charge of examination of witnesses. Flat Top prisoners by the score appeared before the body. These convicts are said to have been questioned as to the death of Knox and recent outbreaks at the camp when convicts have risen against each other as a result of divided sentiment in the Knox inquiry. Knox died under mysterious circumstances at Flat Top in 1924.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 30—As a result of a trip of inspection yesterday to Flat Top prison mine, the Jefferson County grand jury, investigating the death of James W. Knox, today summoned 23 new witnesses from among the prisoners at that camp.

These new witnesses were said to have knowledge of an outbreak at Flat Top yesterday, caused by a fight between convict factions over the Knox case.

Some of the witnesses also were reported to have knowledge of events connected with the death of Knox. Quiet prevailed at Flat Top today following the transfer to other camps of the principals involved in the outbreak.

It was explained by officials that a group of convicts objected to the testimony alleged to have been given by Whittie Freeman, a straw boss at the mine, before the grand jury. Freeman held off his assailants with blasting powder until help arrived.

The convicts it is said, are divided upon the question of the inquiry, some taking the part of prison officials in charge, while at the mine, received first hand information from scores of convicts who had not been summoned to Birmingham.

Prison officials said that no serious trouble occurred at Flat Top yesterday and that the attack on Freeman brought no inquiry to person or property. Freeman is alleged to belong to the faction that is standing by the prison management.

Inquiry into the Freeman incident brought to light another minor insurrection a few days ago, when two negro convicts were beaten by fellow negro convicts because they had written a letter to a Birmingham newspaper praising conditions at Flat Top.

The Revealing Romance of a flapper's adventures on life's highway

Miss Nobody

"I have no man—no men" flared Barbara. Nan rose and lifted a deprecating hand.

"Let's not fight. The point is that I should like to be able to tell the attorney downstairs that you are leaving."

"At once!" cried Barbara. "I shall pack now."

But when Nan left she was not at once energetic. A lassitude seized her.

"I'm not a good boy—any more," she whispered miserably, appalled to find herself cringing at the prospect of a return to the daily battle for bread.

She drifted to the nursery and knelt at the side of the crib. She touched the silky hair on the knobby little head on the pillow and the child noticed her of a return to wakeful consciousness with a gurgle.

"I'm sorry I woke you, nameless dear one," murmured Barbara. She dreamed. The baby spluttered again. "For a gentleman," admonished mama, "whose grandmother was the reigning Carmen of her day, you've got a raucous voice. You'll never make a name for yourself on the stage." A shadow fell on her mind. "And, son, you'll have to make a name for yourself. I can't give you one."

"Forgive me, baby mine. I didn't mean it. I'm glad—glad!"

"Oh," cried Barbara, "I wish that a freight had passed—that day."

She reached for the tiny body with supplicating arms.

"Forgive me, baby mine. I didn't mean it. I'm glad—glad!"

In the door behind Nan stood white-faced until Barbara turned.

"You're wanted," she said to Barbara hoarsely—and added, wildly—"I wasn't wanted at all."

She vanished from the embrasure.

Barbara rose from her knees slowly.

"What now?" her spirit groaned, as she walked back toward the drawing room. "More trouble?"

A strange man confronted her alone. Nan had vanished. Barbara looked at the stranger apprehensively.

"Mr. Walden—the attorney?" she guessed aloud. She studied the lean, bald, solemn gentleman and reached out her hand.

"For the estate," said the human owl, as he solemnly accepted the little hand.

"I told Mrs. Adams to tell you," said Barbara listlessly, "that I'll get out quick. I won't make trouble."

The attorney's hands expressed a state of apologetic dismay.

"But you must not leave too suddenly," he protested. "Very unbecoming—for the mother of the heir to the estate."

Barbara gasped. "You said—"

she began thinly.

"Mrs. Adams," said Mr. Walden, "is given a tidy sum, with the proviso that she rejoin her husband in Tokio immediately and that she make no attack on the will's validity. A much greater sum is settled on your son."

He waited for Barbara's reaction. Stunned, she had none. Disappointed, he resumed. His talk was a meaningless buzzing in her ears. Five million. She caught that. Baby was to have five million! Astounding! The man talked on and on, right through several passing centuries. When he rose, peeved by her lack of response, to make his departure, Barbara could summon from numb nerves only a faint show of grateful gesture and smile. He went and she suffered a violent reaction.

Pent up resentments welled in her. Hatred things struggled in her for expression. She had been submerged too long—too long. Too long had she suffered without protest. She could not help herself. Some foreign force drove her. She ran to her escritoire, seized paper and pen and scribbled:

"Dear Mrs. Adams:

"If you're without funds I'll be glad to assist."

"BARBARA BROWN.

"P. S.—To save scandal!"

Hardiman's Son

With the feeling that she was sleepwalking, Barbara wandered slowly up the broad stairs, making her room and solitude for thought her destination.

She was annoyed at the equanimity with which he had accepted her unexpected and amazing good fortune.

She thought of Bravo—Hardiman's son.

The first time he had kissed her, she recalled vividly, her heart had pounded.

This news she had received from the lawyer left her cold.

An hour before she had been a beggar. Now she was rich beyond her dreams of wealth. And it didn't seem to matter greatly. Why was that? Just human conceit. That was why people accepted the rarest, most unmerited good luck as fairly due.

"The only woman I could never buy."

That was what Hardiman had called her. And that was why he had left her millions. But he hadn't. She wasn't the heiress. Her son was the heir. Why? And the other left.

She tried to switch her jumbled thoughts to the practical.

For the moment she was as vaguely concerned with herself as would be a woman alone with her millions on a desert island. In any event she was as impotent as a castaway to imagine any objective to which her wealth would help her.

"My man... my baby... me..."

The trinity were the sum total of her thoughts. She tried definitely to contemplate that trinity as incomplete—to forecast the arid existence of widow and orphan for herself and the being that was eventually to grow up and be a man. And she couldn't. She abhorred the prospect of a life in weeds, as nature, it has been mentioned, abhors a vacuum. It was a vacuum, indeed, and out of it, from strangling lungs, she whispered the name Bravo. Her lips formed the syllables of the name. Her ears heard it.

Then she knew that throughout the childbearing and the days of soul-sickness that followed, she had denied herself the bitter-sweet imagery which the name released into her starved memory, at a mere whisper.

She wanted to be as brave as the fabled Phoenix, which engenders itself and is proudly solitary. Very well, she had failed. Perhaps there were some women, brave matrons, archaic spirits, who could attain to the ideal of a self-sufficient loneliness. Not she. For the return of her lost love, she realized then, she would gladly surrender all she had—her meaningless millions, her pride, her—

To the inattentive rose silk panels of the opposite wall, from where she stood just inside the door of her room, she whispered her ultimate confession.

"Yes, God forgive me, I'd give my baby, too!"

It occurred to her she could get definite instructions as to her immediate duties from the polysyllabic Mr. Walden she had left downstairs, marooned in the pantry.

She rang for the maid and told her to bring the attorney to her. There was a long delay before Mr. Walden entered, with motions of ludicrous haste, as if in flight.

"I was intercepted," he gasped, in comic dismay. "On the stairs. A white-haired lady. She wanted money for Ukrainians. She had the nerve to ask for a hundred thousand dollars!"

"Could I command such a sum, if I needed it?" asked Barbara.

"You could," he affirmed, and immediately became admonitory. "But you'd have to reconcile it with whatever consideration you feel you may owe to Hardiman's other—"

He swallowed the last word and re-versed—to the deceased's missing child.

His inadvertent confession that he, too, was convinced that Hardiman had been her baby's father did not escape Barbara, but she ignored it and responded to the reference to Hardiman's child.

"That child is mentioned in the will, you say?" she asked eagerly.

"Of course. I told you. You didn't give me a chance to outline the details."

"You may have the rest of the afternoon."

Mr. Walden expanded his chest.

"The will," he expounded, "specifically mentions this offspring—name and sex unknown—as an heir, under certain unique conditions. Excluding benefactions to the various institutions I mentioned, one-half of the estate goes, as you know, to your child. The other half, barring minor bequests, to Mrs. Adams and—er—others, is practically held in trust by you. The will leaves all that half to the missing child of the deceased if it is found within a period of five years by agents who are to be engaged by my firm."

"If he is found—"

"Exactly. During that five years you enjoy the income from that amount. And if the child isn't found within the specified time, the whole amount will revert to you, to control absolutely."

"A considerable sum, I suppose?"

"Roughly speaking, you'll enjoy, for five years, an income of your own of about $250,000 a year, and will also administer a similar amount for your child."

He paused.

What was her duty here? For that matter, what was her inclination? Bravo's continued abandonment of her, she had now to admit, left no hope that he would ever return of his own accord. She had definitely to embrace the hateful idea that she had given all her love to a man who had returned none of it.

Mr. Walden was speaking again.

A CHILD'S CONVULSION IS LIKE A CHILL

Usually Such a Nervous Upset Is Due to Some Digestive Disturbance, Which Is Remedied by Purging and a Hot Bath.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

At a dinner, a few weeks ago, I sat next to a charming lady who had lots to say about her grandchildren. It was hard for me to believe she could really be a grandmother—she appeared far too young and vivacious to belong to the grandmother group. But she insisted she is really a grandmother.

She was disturbed over the fact that just before she left home one of her grandchildren had had a convulsion. She wanted to know all about convulsions, what they mean and what to do for them.

A convulsion in a child is quite a different thing from a convulsion in an adult. It is not at all uncommon for a child to suffer this way, when a grown-up would have a chill. This is the case in children up to the age of two or three years, and particularly after the first six months of life.

There is a disease called "tetany" by the doctors.

The chief sign of the condition is a peculiar sensitiveness or irritability of the nervous system. Stimulation or excitement, which in most persons would be of no consequence, will produce violent reaction. The convulsion is the common symptom.

It is probable that frequent convulsive attacks, coming on without warning or from trifling causes, must raise the suspicion of tetany or a tendency to tetany. But when there are only occasional convulsions we should look for some material exciting cause, and in most cases it will be found in the digestive tract. Swallowing a quantity of an indigestible material is very often responsible for a violent convulsion.

Indigestion and overeating are among the common causes of convulsive attacks. Emptying the stomach has been the first thing to be done.

As I have said, the convulsion in the child takes the place of the chill in the adult. We need not be surprised then to find this to be the first sign of pneumonia, influenza, bronchitis, scarlet fever or other infectious disease.

If the kidneys are not eliminating as they should, there may be more or less poisoning of the system. Severe and repeated convulsions sometimes follow.

There are convulsive seizures which are met in the course of certain more serious conditions involving the brain and nervous system. I am not considering that type of the trouble. Today I speak only of the passing and trifling convulsive attacks which little children have on occasions.

I am not surprised that the young mother is terribly upset over the apparently alarming symptoms. As I write I can hear in memory the screams of such a mother in a home where I happened to be calling. As a young doctor, I was almost as much distressed as the members of the family who were with me at the time.

The baby is pale, the eyes roll up, the head is drawn back, the muscles of the face and limbs twitch, and pretty soon the whole body is in convulsive movements. The breathing almost stops, the heart is very weak, there is a rattling in the throat and death seems very near.

As soon as possible the child should be put in a hot bath. But please bear in mind that the water must not be too hot. In the excitement don't forget that many a baby has been scalded in moments like these.

Support the head, keeping it above the water, and apply cold compresses. Cold to the head and heat to all the rest of the body—that is the rule to follow. Very quickly the child responds.

An enema to empty the bowels will be most useful. The doctor will direct the medical treatment.

Answers to Health Queries

A. M. F. Q.—Lately I have had a terrible ache in my left arm, including the chest and bust on that side—when I rest it seems to quiet down. I also have the trouble in my lower limbs if on the feet too much. What would you advise?

A.—Probably neuritis, first of all determine the source of infection in your system. The teeth, tonsils, sinuses, intestines and kidneys are all possible sources of the trouble. Heat should give relief until your doctor prescribes.

ANNUAL REPORT OF FARM FERTILIZER COMMITTEE GIVEN

Improved Methods Of Farming Adopted
Says Ford

FARMERS PLAN DIVERSIFICATION

Rebate At The End Of Year Expected To Be Larger

The annual report of the Morgan County Farm Bureau association upon the increased use of fertilizer as a farm aid was made public today.

County Farm Agent J. C. Ford stated today that Morgan farmers are getting nearer each year to the ideal methods for farming, the full utilization of all resources at the hands of farmers, he diversified farming idea, and the advantage of co-operating marketing. This indication given along with the annual report of the Farm Bureau Fertilizer committee, giving a definite idea of the increase in Morgan County of the adoption of improved farming methods.

Following is the annual report of the Fertilizer committee of the Morgan County Farm Bureau submitted to the directors:

Amount of Material Handled

The records show delivery of 478 3-4 tons of Acid Phosphate, 268 tons of Nitrate of Soda, 53.7 tons of Muriate of Potash and 22.9 tons of Kainit. A total of 823.35 tons for the season.

Points of Delivery

Material has been delivered at Falkville, Hartselle, Decatur, Trinity and Chunn's Gin Landing on the Tennessee River, Hartselle and Decatur have been the main points.

Prices Paid By Members

Members have paid $19.50 for Acid Phosphate, $59.60 to $61.20, depending on the time of delivery for Nitrate of Soda, $41.00 to $41.60 for Potash and $16.00 to $16.60 for Kainit.

Most of the members are using the famous Auburn formula of 200 pounds Acid Phosphate, 100 pounds Nitrate of Soda and 25 pounds Muriate of Potash, which analyzes about 10-5-1-2-4. This high grade fertilizer has cost them an average of $36.30 a ton.

Rebate At End of Season

The Farm Bureau operates on the rebate or patronage dividend basis. Last year the members were rebated $1.25 at the end of the season. This year it is expected to be more though the amount is not definitely known at this time. When the rebate is in, it will reduce the already low prices the members have paid for this fertilizer.

W. Worthington, Klan official, before Judge J. P. McCoy.

When commanded to hand over the money the messengers opened fire. Both were struck by the volley of shots the robbers returned but they continued to fire until the robbers sped away in an automobile. The injured men, Raymond Rees, assistant cashier, and Larry Steigerwald, 60, bank custodian were removed to a hospital in serious conditions.

12 Years Ago From the Daily of TODAY

April 30, 1914

C. E. Frost, H. R. Walker and P. W. Hendricks are in the Decatur today inspecting our new streets.

Claude Crawford fell from a scaffold at the Crawford Lumber company this morning, breaking his right leg.

Mrs. Joe Giles, of Huntsville, has returned to her home after a visit to her brother, S. H. Dublin.

Miss Margaret Curry will leave in the morning
for Athens, where she will visit Miss Marjory Rainey.

Mrs. Anna Phillip Borden and Mr. James Irvin
Chrissinger were married last evening.

We presume that with dog days in the offing, every dog will soon have his day.

Spring sales and spring days go together, at least we have the spring sales.

If Ponzi's brilliant brain could find some way for its owner to stay out of jail, more people would have confidence in its wizardry.

The fellow who expresses a belief that a joint meeting between farmers and merchants is the bunk, has never been present at one of these old-fashioned get-togethers.

News that Dr. Erskine Chenault is beyond the danger of death is gratifying to friends in Albany-Decatur, where he was reared and where he will probably ultimately settle. Dr. Chenault comes from a family that has been valuable in the building of these cities, valuable as builders of character and thought.

The conviction of two negroes for the charge of rape and the possible conviction of a third should impress upon the races of the earth, the seriousness of the crime. In the eyes of man, rape and murder constitute sufficient grounds for the death penalty, the laws should be enforced alike on all races of the globe, soon the crime wave would come to an end.

People of these cities regret the fire loss to the city of Somerville and to the owners of the buildings. Yet, the Somerville folk, like other North Alabamians, come of a stock wishing to build and to keep on building. Beautiful buildings will likely rise from the ruins of the fire, adding to the natural beauty already in the Somerville district.

The arrest of Clois Martin at Paris, Tenn., is significant. Martin's supporters sent the grapevine warning to those friendly to law enforcement that if an arrest were made in connection with the slaying, to which Martin is alleged to have confessed, that seven more would die.
Another case of the conviction of men that might does not make right, another blow to the practice of feudists who believe like the ancient Chinese, that what their forefathers did was good enough to follow.

SELECTION OF THIS CITY AS CONVENTION POINT AND ELECTION OF JONES SATISFACTORY

Local Masonic circles are jubilant over the decision reached at Tuscaloosa to meet in these cities in next April and the selection of John W. Jones as Grand Warder of the Knights Templar organization of the state. The convention hardly could have turned out more favorably for this section of Alabama. At the convention next April every North Alabama city will have a chance to send large delegations to attend the general sessions of the body. The Twin Cities more than ever deserve the name of the convention cities, their ideal location again being pointed to as an important factor in the final building of the section.

John W. Jones will serve well in his recognized position among Masonic leaders of the state. Mr. Jones has served the interests of his order well while here and will have a greater field of endeavor in his new capacity.

EVERY MAN FILLS HIS NICHE, IT'S UP TO HIM IF HE FILLS IT WELL

For every man there is a niche in the hall of fame, it has his nameplate already inscribed, but usually he does not see it, or rather refuses to see it. The same man who will read a book about this age as being the age of specialization will sit and dream of the great things he could do if only he had the power of some leader in his particular line. The ten cent store operator would like to be a Woodworth, the amateur cartoonist wants to be a Tad or a Westover, the writer would like to be a Brisbane, the physician a Mayo, or a Barker, the alderman,
a Norris (privately), the choir singer, a Marian Talley.
Really, it is unfortunate that the high places are always is an importance, a duty that if left undone, may prove a serious handicap to a vast organization.

Dreaming is splendid, ambition is at the root of all notable achievement, but ambition cannot be realized on a rotten foundation, the first work must be done first and it must be done well. Every great educator this country has had started learning the alphabet with the building of blocks, every great financial wizard started his career slipping pennies in the savings bank, under the careful direction of mother, who at some time or other had to whip little hands to keep them from stealing the pennies away again. Start at the bottom of things, get at the foundation, fill the place you have now and sooner or later you will realize, if not immersed in your work, that you are a step higher than you used to be.

IF IT'S CIVIC BUILDING, THEN KEEP IT ON YOUR MIND

What's on your mind? Have you heard that greeting anywhere before as you went about your daily hunt for bread and meat? Perhaps, more than likely. Wonder what would happen if you answered, "Well, I've been thinking about what a nice fellow my neighbor is, and how good and kind my competitor is, and how long it will be before my city, with my aid, can become the city that we all expect it to become some day?" You'll probably blush when you read this and feel a little embarrassed, you did that sort of thing at one time in your life and had so many setbacks that you decided that one must be an iconoclast and see things in the darkness, to be popular with his fellow-beings. Brother, you are due for enlightenment. Some day the sun is going to shine through and you will see that the things you have said about your city that were hurtful, the criticism you directed against your neighbor and your utter lack of spirit when ever anyone suggested co-operation, have done nobody harm but you. You will suddenly awaken with a great city built about you and you will wonder how in the world the city was built without your aid. But it's coming and unless you make up your mind now that you have the best neighbors, towns, and everything else why more than likely you will wake up to what there is in this Tennessee Valley of ours. Talk the good things of your cities, people will give you a quizzical smile at first, but you will be feeding them the best tonic since Lydia Pinkham went into the Vegetable Compound business. Then when they get the habit and things do start moving right, as they always do when everybody is interested, why you can pat yourself on the back for a good job completed.
Talk good things and soon you will be hearing good things, the theory works two ways.

NORRIS SEEN IN STILL ANOTHER LIGHT AS SHOALS LEGISLATION HALTS

Senator Norris, the savior of Alabama! That is a new title for the Nebraskan, particularly when it comes from this section of the United States. Senator George Norris who has been ridiculed for the past seven years by the people of North Alabama is now a savior and what is the cause for this transfiguration of character? Senator Norris is opposing the lease of the Shoals to the Associated Power combine which would serve the farmers with fertilizer, but create a power monopoly. Taken all in all the Power Company bid is not so different from all other bids that have been handed to the Senate committee, the difference is in the bidder. Norris fears the power combine, the people of Alabama fear the power combine, people of this state do not know if the state will have control over the distribution of the surplus power created at Muscle Shoals. A. G. Patterson, president of the Public Service Commission, declares that the state's control is supreme, having control first over the building of lines and the costs of power, to be considered before national wishes and people hope that he is right, but they are not yet certain what legal phases might turn up, although
New York and Maine operate power under their own control.

Norris will fight the power bid until the end, though the end not be anywhere near in sight at this time. Congress is on the verge of adjournment and it is probable that Muscle Shoals will choke up other legislation if allowed to center the attention of the Senate body. Private advices to the Shoals cities declare that the bid will not be taken up at this term. In that event the people of this section will feel relieved, not so much that they fear the administration of the power combine, as they do not desire to go into uncertainty of the future. They hesitate to step into the darkness where they know not where their next step will lead them. That is the status of the Shoals question at this time. Little did The Daily believe that Senator George Norris would ever be viewed as a savior in this section of the country, particularly when the question of Muscle Shoals remained to be settled.
There are many changes in this world, some of them unaccountable. The Shoals issue and Norris is numbered among the unaccountables.

UNCERTAINTY ENVELOPES THE ISSUE OF $75,000,000 FOR GOOD ROADS

What is the chief objection to the bond issue of $75-000,000 for good roads in the state of Alabama? Why is all this talk of an extra session of the legislature, useless expenditure of funds, inadequate highways for the state, going the rounds? Why has it centered the minds of Alabamians for nearly a year past? The Daily believes that fundamental reason may be found in the lack of knowledge on the part of the general public, regarding the real issues of the state campaign for good roads.

When you talk good roads and a bond issue you will usually find opposition. Some have changed recently, others who had been sold on the idea, following Mr. Rogers, chairman of the state highway department, visit here, have worn out with the waiting and feel at a loss as to what they would vote for were it to come to an issue.

The state highway department, that is, the proponents of the bond issue, are doing considerable advertising in favor of good roads and their advertising is not amiss, so far as the roads are concerned. When the issue is dovetailed with the candidacy of Charles McDowell, people usually take another thought for Charlie has not stood the test of time as his records for the time he was in the legislature will show. The people of Alabama need to know the issue, that they might face the issue.

The Alabama Automotive Association is busy itself with bringing experts here to determine the actual status of road conditions in this state. In the meantime would it not be a capital idea on the part of the state, highway department, or the leaders of the bond issue fight, to really acquaint the people with what the issue is and how it is to be paid for? That question settled will bring votes for the $75,000,000 bond issue, though we do not believe that Charles McDowell will be in the governor's chair at the time the fund is voted.

Future For Young Men

Perhaps the most important, from the standpoint of the young men of the state, was led by Erskine Ramsay, of Birmingham, who was one of the convention speakers, his topic being "The Future of the Young Man in Alabama."

The discussion was participated in both formally and informally. The advantages of Alabama being recounted and a bright future painted for the army of young men who, instead of going into other sections to make their way, and contributing to the upbuilding of some other state, remain in Alabama to develop themselves and their commonwealth.

The plea to young men to remain in this state, under plans worked out by the Alabama Junior Chamber of Commerce, will be included in scores of commencement addresses this year.
The graduating classes of scores of schools, as a result of the Junior's interest in the matter, will hear an appel for its members to remain in Alabama, where opportunity is plentiful.

Entertainment Is Lavish

The entertainment provided the visitors by the Mobile Junior Chamber of Commerce was lavish. Two banquets were given in honor of visitors, while the delegates were guests,
on successive days of the Kiwanis club and the Rotary club, of Mobile.

On Wednesday afternoon the visitors were taken on a boat ride over Mobile harbor and on Thursday afternoon were guests on a rail trip over the dock development.

Fight Inheritance Tax

The Alabama Junior Chamber of Commerce is endeavoring to acquaint the people with the provisions of the new federal inheritance tax, with the end in view that the Alabama congressional delegation may be able to get some relief from its provisions.

Junior speakers at the Mobile convention told the Kiwanis club of the situation, which briefly is: Alabama has no inheritance tax, but a federal levy recently has been established, with the provision that 80 per cent of whatever payments are made to pay state inheritance taxes may be deducted from the amount paid the government. The effect of this, it was explained, is to force Alabama to levy
an inheritance tax, or for her citizens to be forced to pay more tax into the federal treasury than people in those states which have an inheritance tax.

Barons Get Back Into Stride, Pels Lose To Atlanta, Chicks-Lookouts Split, Vols Win

Birmingham got back into a winning stride yesterday when Barons bats completely submerged a flock of Mobile hurriers, 9-3. At that, Mobile hiters got as many safeties as the Barons, but they didn't bunch 'em, neither did they run the bases in style becoming Class A baseball folks. Grant Gillis, ex-Alabamian, clouted for the circuit.

Atlanta rallied in the ninth inning to put a stop to Pel aspirations for victory yesterday, chasing across the plate in the last half of the ninth frame with the winning marker. Atlanta scored 5 times in the eighth after New Orleans had scored four times in the same inning. All the pitchers in the Southern league were paraded by both teams to halt the rally.

Memphis and Chattanooga decided to split the difference at Memphis yesterday afternoon. Memphis taking the first tilt 5-2 and Chattanooga taking the last 4-2, in seven innings. The Nashville Vols trailed Little Rock for five frames before they found the hitting range. Scoring five times in the sixth and one in the ninth, the Vols sewed things up all in their own peculiar fashion.

Cleveland went to second place today after Chicago had managed a 7-3 victory. The New York Yankees were busy clouting the Washington Senators out of third place. Tony Lazzeri and Goose Goslin hit homers for the afternoon, the demonic Babe Ruth be-

Cincy Reds battered every hurler in the Pittsburgh camp for a 16-0 farce win. Rube Benton, Boston leftover, managed to assail the Giants for a 4-2 victory. Big Jess Petty, who has already dazzled the followers of baseball with his few hit performances, gave the Phillies five safeties yesterday while Brooklyn, led by Jacques Fournier, was piling up a two run lead. Fournier hit for the circuit, the home run being his fourth this year.

To local lovers of baseball, there is an excellent invitation extended for them to come down to Malone Park this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock to witness the Albany high-Huntsville high fracas. Coach Alford has his men in fine demeanor and has prepared to bring the local season near a close in a march of baseball glory.

Farm Legislation Gets Right-of-way

WASHINGTON, April 30—Right of way for farm legislation in the house beginning next Tuesday, with debate limited to four days, was provided, in a resolution introduced today by the rules committee. A special rule will permit a vote on the three bills reported out by the agricultural committee—the Haugen and Price stabilization measure, the Tinchler credit proposal and the Curtis-Aswell national commodity marketing plan. While general debate will be confined to four days, it is not expected that the legislation will reach a final vote for a week or ten days, owing to the time necessary for the consideration of amendments.

OF ALBANY-DECATUR

Will Open Monday, May 3

This institution was organized to assist salaried people and wage earners to properly finance themselves at a reasonable rate of interest. All loans will be made over a period of months re-payable in equal monthly, semi-monthly or weekly payments to suit each person's income and convenience.

- (3)—That money so borrowed should always be for some useful purpose.

Upon these three principles the Citizens Industrial Bank will be operated.

Queen O' the May

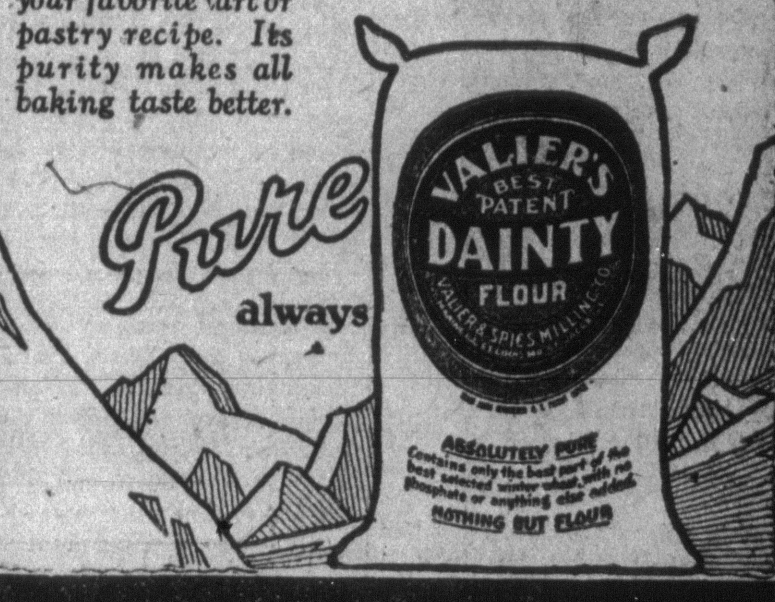

Oh, am I to be Queen of the May, Mother, Am I to be Queen of the May?

THE old familiar lines can well be changed to a question addressed to every mother. For Queens are "sweetness and light" only because Queens are well nourished. The starved, underweight body—the flighty temper—the fumbling mind—the lack-luster eye—these are not the things that Queens are made of. And the science of today regards them all as the direct results of malnutrition.

Give your own little Queen lots of good food—lots of open air—lots of exercise. And when she wants sweets give her cookies, tarts, and pastries made with Dainty. Valier's Dainty Flour is milled from the rich, creamy centers of the choicest soft winter wheat. All baking made with Dainty is rich with the full, natural flavor of this finest wheat. No phosphates or other adulterants are ever added to Dainty. Dainty is always pure. It makes your baking nourishing—wholesome—delicious. Dainty baking means bright eyes—eager limbs—heartly spirits. In every sack is body building food for Queens. Order Dainty today.

INDEPENDENTS TO START PLAY SOON

Several Cities Are Preparing Minor League Teams

(Associated Press)
BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 30.—Independent baseball teams in Alabama are expected to swing into action within another month, with several towns reported to be forming clubs.

With the close of colleges of the states, smaller towns of the state can afford to employ these college diamond stars who are allowed to participate in only a limited number of games.

Selma, Gadsden, Huntsville, Anniston, Decatur, Cullman, Sylacauga and many other towns are expected to put forth teams this summer.

Efforts on the part of the Selma men and citizens of Gadsden to form a Class D league with several of the towns, some of them in Georgia and Florida have seemingly failed and these towns, if they promote summer baseball will have to do so on an independent basis.

The Avondale Mills team of Sylacauga is expected to follow its custom of promoting a club for that town, while the Alabama Power company team of Anniston is also expected to represent that city. There has been some talk, however, in those circles to promote entirely a town team.

Gadsden has not had a representative team for some years, since they put an independent club on the field that won 60 games and lost 15, never dropping a series. Several members of that team have since entered professional ranks.

The four professional teams of the state in organized baseball are reported in a midst of a keen competition for the pennant in their respective leagues. Both Birmingham and Mobile are given inside chances at the pennant in the Southern League.

The Montgomery Lions, just entering the newly organized Southeastern League, has circulated reports that the team can be expected in the thick of the fight. Sheffield, of the Tri-State League is having a fair success of it with its team.

ANOTHER RECORD CROWD AT SOUTHSIDE BAPTIST EXPECTED

Interest in the revival services at the Southside Baptist church continues to increase. Notwithstanding the fact that yesterday was pay-day, a good crowd was present to hear the sermon on "Phillip and Eunuch," by Pastor Olive last night, and at the close of the service three additions to the membership were received. A displacement of Wednesday night's crowd, which taxed the seating capacity of the building even after using a Sunday School room where the occupants could hear, but could not see, the speaker, is expected tonight.

Rev. Olive said this morning: "We certainly appreciate the publicity you are giving our services. Please tell the people today that we are especially anxious to have the unsaved present."

Twenty Candidates Await Baptism As the Revival Service at Decatur Baptist Closes

The revival meeting at the Decatur Baptist church will come to a close tonight when Dr. J. Powell Tucker, the evangelist, will preach his farewell message on "Pilate." The people from all sections of Albany-Decatur have filled the house every evening to hear his splendid messages and the interest has been good from the beginning nearly two weeks ago. It is expected a large crowd will hear Dr. Tucker and Mr. Lee on this closing night.

Dr. C. C. Davison, the pastor, announced that his sixth year would close May first and that he would celebrate his sixth anniversary as pastor on Sunday May 2nd. All members of the church and congregation are expected on that day. A suitable program will be rendered and the pastor will preach to the new members and the church on "What God Saved Me For." He will use on this day the texts he used the first day he preached in Decatur six years ago. The pastor especially desires that the many members that have been received during his pastorate be present.

There are twenty or more candidates awaiting baptism. They will likely be baptized Sunday night after the evening service.

Princess Theater tomorrow
Describing the new William Fox production 'As No Man Has Loved,' based on Edward Everett Hale's story 'The Man Without a Country,' as "an achievement deeper than a triumph and amounting almost to glory" R. F. Sisk, New York correspondent for The Baltimore Sun, devotes two columns to a review of the picture in a recent edition of his paper. Mr. Sisk says in part:
"Because William Fox has made Edward Everett Hale's 'The Man Without a Country' into a film of such surpassing intelligence, simplicity and sincerity, he is and has been the recipient of bucketfuls of praise. 'As No Man Has Loved' is hereby set down as the finest patriotic film ever produced in America."

"It is not the largest. 'The Birth of a Nation' held more thrills, and 'Janice Meredith' probably cost three times as much to make. 'America' had a greater individual thrill. But none of these unless 'The Birth of a Nation' be counted, held such a powerful lesson in patriotism. And where 'As No Man Has Loved' draws away from all of them is that its patriotism is not that which demands allegiance to the Stars and Stripes."

"But it teaches a patriotism that was felt by the Confederate soldiers and its lesson is equally applicable to the soldiers and people of France."

2800 Pounds Up!

IT'S easy enough to support 2800 pounds on four balloon tires and a strong frame, but if you were to turn a Studebaker Duplex upside down, the top would support the 2800 pounds of car weight—and then some.

The upper structure of the famous Duplex is built of husky steel—an integral part of the body. It has been the means of saving many lives in accidents which would have been fatal in the old-style open car.

Double safety! Double comfort, too, for roller side enclosures are its outstanding feature. In 30 seconds the curtains may be lowered, thus providing closed car protection.
